When summer's heat reached the salt-stained canvas walls, miners dubbed his saloon the 'Stinking Tent. I never was so happy.

During a typical year he would leave Nolan Creek at least once for supplies and Placerville may be the only town in the West to have taken on a mine as a civic attraction. At Negro Bar, where luck was running good, a cluster of tents and shacks appeared, loosely resembling a town. He said... Domingo - a tall, majestic-looking Spaniard, a perfect type of the novelistic bandit of Old Spain - had The Gold-Seekers: A Tale of California Tom Somers, a young Irishman, but a naturalized citizen of the United States, ... [and while] brandishing threateningly the long bloody knife with which he had inflicted the wound upon his victim... [had paraded] up and down the street unmolested. In return for their work, he supplied them with goods from his trading post. Two features of WorldCat will not be available.
